George Washington and His Hatchet

When George Washington was quite a little boy, his father gave him a red hatchet. It was bright and new, and George took great delight in going around and chopping things with it.

He ran into the garden, and there he saw a tree which seemed to say to him: "Come and cut me down!"

George had often seen his father's men chop down the great trees in the forest, and he thought that it would be fun to see a tree fall with a crash to the ground. So he set to work with his little hatchet, and, as the tree was a very small one, it did not take long to come down.

Soon after that, his father came home.

"Who has been cutting my fine young cherry tree?" he cried. "It was the only tree of its kind in this country, and it cost me a great deal of money."

He was very angry when he came into the house.
"If I only knew who cut down that cherry tree," father cried, "I would—yes, I would"—

"Father!" cried little George. "I will tell you the truth about it. I chopped the tree down with my hatchet."

His father forgot his anger.

"George," he said, and he took the little fellow in his arms, "George, I am glad that you told me about it. I would rather lose a dozen cherry trees than hear you tell one lie."

Questions:

1. What kind of hatchet did George's dad give him?

    a. Red

    b. New

    c. Rusty

    d. Pretend

2. Why didn't it take long for George to cut down the tree?

    a. George had a friend help him

    b. The tree was already dead

    c. George had a huge axe

    d. The tree was very small

3. You can tell from the story that:

    a. George is honest

    b. George's father is very poor

    c. George loves to be inside

    d. George's mother is a great baker

4. How might George's father have gotten the cherry tree?

    a. He found it in the woods

    b. George gave it to him for his birthday

    c. It grew from a magic seed

    d. It was purchased from a friend from another county

The Boy Who Cried Wolf

A boy named John was once taking care of some sheep not far from a forest. Nearby was a village, and he was told to call for help if there was any danger.

One day, he thought he would have some fun, and he cried out with all his might, "The wolf is coming! The wolf is coming!" The men came running with clubs and axes to save the boy from the wolf. As they saw nothing, they went home again and left John laughing in his sleeve.

The day before he had had so much fun, John cried out again the next day, "The wolf! The wolf!" The men came again. This time not as many as the first time. Again they saw no trace of the wolf, so they shook their heads and went back.

On the third day, the wolf came in earnest. John cried in dismay, "Help! Help! The wolf! The wolf!" Not a single man came to help him. The wolf broke into the flock and attacked the sheep. Among them was a beautiful lamb that belonged to John. Then he felt very sorry that he had deceived his friends and neighbors, and he grieved over the loss of his pet lamb.
The truth itself is not believed from one who often has deceived.

Questions:

1. Why does the boy shout, "The wolf is coming" the first time?

2. Why will no one help the boy when the wolf actually comes?

3. What do you think the boy learned by the end of the story?

4. What do the people's actions tell you about how they feel about wolves?

The Fox and the Little Red Hen

Once upon a time there was a little red hen. She lived in a little white house, and she had a little green garden. Every day she worked in the house and garden.

Near her home lived a family of foxes. One day Mamma Fox said to Papa Fox, "I want a fat hen to eat." There was nothing in the pantry for the baby foxes, so Papa Fox started out to find something for them all.

He ran down the road until he came to the woods. "Surely I will find something here," he said, but he found nothing to eat in the woods. As he came near the little green garden he said, "Oh, I smell fresh cake. Oh, I smell a little red hen."

Sure enough, there was the Little Red Hen eating her cake.

Papa Fox snuck up quietly behind her and grabbed her and put her into the bag on his back; then he ran quickly off down the hill toward his home.

The Little Red Hen was so frightened that she could only whisper, "Oh, dear. Oh, dear. Oh, dear."

Just then she had to sneeze, and when she put her claw into her pocket for her handkerchief, she felt her little scissors. Quick as a flash she took them out and cut a little hole in the bag. Peeping out she saw a great hill just ahead, all covered with stones. As Papa Fox stopped to rest on his way up the hill, with his back turned toward her, she cut a big hole in the bag, jumped out and quickly put a big stone in the bag in her place.

As Papa Fox kept on up the hill, he thought the bag was pretty heavy, but he said, "Never mind, she is a fat little red hen."

Mamma Fox met him at the front door with all the baby foxes.

"The water is boiling," said she. "What do you have in your bag?" asked the Baby Foxes.

"A fat, little, red hen," said Papa Fox.

As he held the bag over the pot, he said to Mamma Fox, "When I drop her in, you clap on the lid." So he opened the bag. Splash went the boiling water. It spilled all over Papa Fox and Mamma Fox and the Baby Foxes. Never again did they try to catch the Little Red Hen.

Skedaddle's Big Boast

Skedaddle the monkey lived deep in the jungle. Tall trees with giant leaves shaded the ground, and long vines grew from the trees. Skedaddle loved to swing from the vines. He also loved to travel from one end of the jungle to the other. He would come back to his home and tell the other monkeys what he had seen and done.

One evening, Skedaddle dangled from a branch over the heads of the other monkeys. He told an exciting tale about what he'd done while crossing the jungle.

"I taught the snakes on the other side of the jungle to eat wild yams!" he boasted. "They love them."

The other monkeys gasped in surprise. The snakes were one of the biggest dangers of the jungle.

"There are trees of gold that never run out of fruit," Skedaddle said. "I planted more of them so the animals there would always have food."

The other monkeys gasped in surprise. Sometimes, it was hard for them to find food. Trees that never ran out of fruit would solve the problem.

"I helped a family of elephants build a bridge across a river." Skedaddle swung around the branch then did a little dance. "Now they don't have to get their feet wet."

The other monkeys gasped. That was an amazing feat.

"Hogwash!"

Skedaddle looked down to see Monkeyshines, an older monkey who had a lot of followers. He stood with his arms crossed and a frown on his face.

"I can prove it!" Skedaddle said. "The elephants will tell you." He pointed to where the elephants made their way through the forest.

Monkeyshines laughed, and the other monkeys joined him. "There is no need for that," he said. "Just go to the other side of the jungle and bring back a golden fruit. That will prove what you say is true."

Skedaddle picked at his fur as he thought. "All right," he said after several minutes. "I will go to the other side of the jungle and bring back the fruit."

"And I will go with you," Monkeyshines said. He laughed again.

Skedaddle did not know what to say. If Monkeyshines went too, he would know Skedaddle was fibbing.

"Well?" Monkeyshines asked. "Are you ready to go?"

Skedaddle shook his head. "No. I'm too tired to go right now. Perhaps tomorrow."

Monkeyshines and the other monkeys laughed again. "That's what I thought. I suppose there will be an excuse tomorrow as well."

Skedaddle hung his head. Monkeyshines had called out his boast, and now all the monkeys were laughing at him.

Father Frost Knows

The winter wind howled around the house and slipped in around the windows. Anna fed more wood to the fire as her sister sat wrapped in a blanket.

"We must do something about the cold," Lucy said. "I cannot take this much longer."

Anna added another log to the fire. "We will be fine, Lucy. We have enough to eat and plenty of wood. The wind will die down soon."

Lucy grumped and grumbled. "It's getting colder every hour."

Anna's father and mother came through the door of their small cabin in a swirl of wind and snow. Mother shook the snow off her coat, while Father stomped his feet on the floor and hurried to the fire to get warm.

"Did you have a nice trip?" Anna asked. As always, her voice was gentle.

"No," her mother said. "There was no food at the market. They will not have any more food until this weather passes."

Father hugged Anna. "We will be fine," he whispered.

"Why don't I go into the forest and bring back some food?" Anna said. "It is the least I can do to help."

Anna looked up at Father. His eyes looked sad, and he hugged her again.

"Yes," said Lucy. "Hurry up and get us some food."

Without a word, Anna pulled on her coat and boots and headed out into the forest. The sun was setting when she finally found a fir tree. Maybe she could use of the needles to make soup.

Anna pulled the needles from the fir tree and placed them in the sack she carried.

The sun set. Darkness covered the forest. Anna didn't like being outside in the dark. She shivered but kept filling her sack.?

"Are you warm?"

Anna looked up to see an old man with a long, white beard and a long, blue fur coat over his dark shirt and pants. He carried a walking stick, and a sack hung on his back. He was Father Frost.

"Yes, sir. I am plenty warm," Anna said through chattering teeth. The cold cut through her gloves, and she could barely feel her fingers.

"Are you hungry?" Father Frost asked.

"No, sir," Anna replied. She held up her sack. "I have plenty."

Father Frost placed a hand on Anna's shoulder. "Since you are good and kind and have spoken politely, take this."
Anna took the sack and a lantern from Father Frost and hurried home.

"What took you so long?" Lucy snapped. "I'm starving."

Anna placed the sack on the table and opened it. Bread, fruits, and vegetables tumbled out along with gold and gems. There was enough there to keep the family fed for a long time.

"Where did you get this, Anna?" Father asked.

"I saw Father Frost in the forest. He gave them to me."

Father smiled. He knew of Father Frost. The gifts showed that Anna was good and kind.
After she had eaten, Lucy said she wanted to go into the forest. She wanted a sack of treasures like Anna. She put on her coat and went out the door.

Lucy stomped through the forest. She muttered as she walked. She held the lantern in front of her, but she could barely see in the darkness. Finally, she found a fir tree. She wrapped herself in her furs and plopped down in the snow. She hoped Father Frost would hurry up.

"Are you warm?"

Lucy looked up to see Father Frost standing over her with a smile on his face. "Of course not. It's snowing and the wind is blowing. I'm freezing." She jumped to her feet and shook the snow off her cloak.

"Are you hungry?" Father Frost asked.

"Yes!" Lucy cried. "The little bit of bread you gave Anna was barely enough to feed one person. There are four of us. I got almost nothing!" Lucy did not tell Father Frost that she had eaten a lot and had even taken some of Anna's portion. "Now, give me food and jewels so I can go home."

Father Frost scowled. He handed Lucy a heavy sack.

Lucy turned and headed home. She did not even say thank you.

Lucy's mother was waiting at the door when Lucy returned. "Well? What is in the sack?"

"I don't know," Lucy snapped. "It's so cold outside, I haven't even looked." She handed the sack to her mother and went straight to the fire.

Mother dumped the sack on the table. Instead of food and coins, the table was covered with small rocks.

"Father Frost only rewards those who are good and kind," Father said. He turned to Lucy. "Maybe you need to think about how you treat others."
Questions:

1. Put the story events in order.

    _____ Mother dumped a bag of rocks on the table.

    _____ Anna put wood on the fire.

    _____ Father Frost spoke to Anna.

    _____ Lucy went into the woods.

2. What did Lucy do while Anna added wood to the fire?

    a. Lucy polished the silver.

    b. Lucy painted her fingernails.

    c. Lucy sat wrapped in a blanket.

    d. Lucy walked the dog.

3. What did Lucy do when Anna said she would go to look for food?

    a. Lucy offered to help.

    b. Lucy thanked Anna nicely.

    c. Lucy told Anna not to go.

    d. Lucy stayed beside the warm fire.

4.   Draw Father Frost's face when he is speaking to Anna. Now draw it again after he speaks to Lucy.
